STILL UNSOLVED

At the recent Philadelphia convention of the Democratic party, when it became apparent that the time-honored two-thirds rule for making party nominations would be abolished, southern delegates looked about for some device which would increase the number of delegates from those states furnishing the back-bone of Democratic electoral vote. This was sought in an attempt to assure the "Solid South" of a voice in selecting the nominee.

It was finally proposed that the number of delegates to the national convention be apportioned according to the actual votes cast in elections.

However, it appears that this plan won't work out well for Virginia. Somehow, probably due to our poll tax requirement, Virginia does not poll a large popular vote. In 1932 only 295,998 votes were cast for all candidates in the presidential election. At the same election, North Carolina, with only a slightly larger population, cast a grand total of 711,501 votes. And West Virginia, with LESS population cast 740,988 votes. Thus, under the proposed distribution of delegates, West Virginia and North Carolina would each have TWICE AS MANY delegates as Virginia.

Some other scheme will have to be worked out, Virginia must not be thus penalized. The Times-Virginian prefers the old system with the two-thirds rule. Nor do we favor radical tampering with the existing voting requirements in Virginia in an experiment tending to suddenly double the total vote in the state. To bring 300,000 NEW VOTERS to the polls at one time would be a dangerous experiment, in our opinion.

CREWE IS HEARD FROM

The Editor of the Times-Virginian feels flattered that recent editorial utterance from this newspaper have been reprinted in other papers in the state. And, in its lead editorial of last week, the Crewe, Va., CHRONICLE takes issue with our editorial of July 9, concerning a WPA project for the city of Portsmouth aimed to rid that city of RATS.

The CHRONICLE opus makes 2 points. First, the cogent question is raised as to whether or not the editor of the TIMES-VIRGINIAN really knows anything about the rat menace in Portsmouth. Second, it was pointed out that Portsmouth is a "harbor city" and therefore plagued by all manner of dangerous "foreign rats."

As to the first point, the editor of the TIMES VIRGINIAN DOES feel qualified to speak concerning the city of Portsmouth. Said editor was born in Norfolk, and later he LIVED IN Portsmouth. He attended high school in Portsmouth and is a graduate of the Wilson high school, and was the first president of the Portsmouth junior Chamber of commerce. His father was pastor of a leading church there, and his family owns property there now. If there's any city in Virginia we do know anything about, that city is Portsmouth.

And, as to the second point. It appears that the CHRONICLE has made a double error. To begin with, the project in question is not a harbor project. We are informed today by the WPA that Negro women are being employed in Portsmouth to give out rat bait to private homes and business places. The "bait" is a poison, and the same thing is being done in Danville. And, further, we suggest to the CHRONICLE that in his claim of the menace of rats from foreign ships, he has confused Portsmouth with Norfolk. Our grandfather was a tug boat man. As a youth we spent many a happy day aboard tugs plying in Hampton Roads. From Port Norfolk around past the Naval Hospital, on to the ferry dock at the foot of High Street, one gets a good view of foreign ships ON THE NORFOLK SIDE. And we sincerely trust that foreign ships don't use the U. S. Navy Yard! Most of the foreigners you see in Portsmouth came over on the ferry from Norfolk. And finally most of the foreign ships stay out in Hampton Rhoads and do not enter the Elizabeth River at all. The argument that Portsmouth needs a federal rat killing project because of the menace of foreign rats is mighty weak to the TIMES-VIRGINIAN.

And now, we thank the learned editor of the CHRONICLE for recognizing and attesting to our Democracy and loyalty to the present administration. Even as Carter Glass, we shall support the national administration in "All sound measures." After all, the rat incident in Portsmouth is relatively unimportant. It is no better and no worse than hundreds of other federal projects. Doubtless its Portsmouth sponsors were able to make out an adequate case for it, or it would not have been approved.

But there is this to be said. Borrowing the words of Samuel Johnson: "The chains of habit are generally too small to be felt until they are too strong to be broken." We draw the conclusion: Shall localities feed at the federal trough and foreswear local initiative until a habit is formed which in the future may stifle civic enterprise?

Many WPA projects achieve ends entirely worth while, yet are, in our opinion, not truly federal problems. Therefore, we heartily approve of a project to rid Portsmouth of rats. We'd like to see the city rid not only of rats, but of flies, mosquitoes, smoke and trash and bad auto drivers. And whether it helps Norman Hamilton or Colgate Darden, we rejoice to see money in circulation, business aided, and unemployment relieved. But, as a principle of government, the TIMES-VIRGINIAN contends that it is no problem of the central governmental authority to kill off the rats of Portsmouth, swat the flies of Blackstone or oil all the squeaky doors of Appomattox. It is good old-fashioned Democratic doctrine to hold that such matters belong to the sphere of the locality, and that the central government should devote its energies to problems more national in flavor. And perhaps, if one is a true party man, he will seek to keep the conduct of affairs by his party on such a plane as will continue to merit support.

AT ANY RATE:

If rats get into the office of the editor of the TIMES-VIRGINIAN, he will combat them in good old American fashion, and when he has driven them to cover and chinked all their holes, he shall be proud, and independent, and glad that we did not increase our neighbor's tax rate. And have no cry about "Uncle, uncle, there's a rat in the closet and you'll have to poison it for me."

Editor, Times-Virginian,
Dear Sir,

Mr. A. R. Harwood comes out in last week's issue of the Times-Virginian in answer to Father Darkleaf's comment on the "Mystery Building." He says, "About 60 days ago they decided to build the building with good prospects for renters of an office and store block." Then they decided on a mill. Did the burning of the Rosser Mill cause them to suddenly change and decide on a mill? Mr. Harwood seems very desirous of boosting the town. But a lot of people cooperate in getting some industry to town without any financial interest in the industry, they are boosting the town. But when an individual or company starts up an industry of their own are they the most interested in boosting the town or of their own pocketbook. Mr. Harwood refers to the Appomattox Hardware Company succeeding. Well, when that opened it was the only one here. Another started up, where is it now. There was a tobacco warehouse here. Mr. Harwood was with a group that opened up another. Is that one running now?

If Mr. Harwood is so anxious to boost the town, why not bring it some new enterprise instead of setting up some in opposition, especially to one just having the misfortune of being burned out by lightening

Yours truly,
J. M. Rosser.

Keep Young Pigs Away From Worms

Better Than to Doctor Them After They Have Become Infected.

By H. W. TAYLOR, Extension Swine Specialist, North Carolina State College. WNU Service.

Plow up that wormy old hog lot and plant it to some crop. Roundworms are very injurious to young pigs. It is better to keep them away from worms than to dose them with worm medicine after they have become infested.

A few days before farrowing time scrub the sow thoroughly with a brush, using soap and warm water to remove dirt and worm eggs. Then put the sow in a clean field containing a suitable forage crop where there have been no hogs for at least 12 months.

Keep other pigs and hogs away from the clean lot, and keep new born pigs away from old, dirty hog lots. Leave the pigs on pasture until they are at least four months old. If possible, leave them there until ready for market or until they can be turned into the corn fields.

For summer pasture, plant soy beans in rows, cultivate them twice, and turn in the pigs when the beans are about 12 inches high.

Pigs after being farrowed should be castrated, weaned, and started on full feed two months later. Fill the self-feeder with shelled corn and tankage or tankage so the pigs can help themselves.

When cottonseed meal is cheap, it may be mixed with the fish meal or tankage in equal parts. Soy bean meal or peanut meal may be used in place of cottonseed meal in the mixture.

Corn should not be fed alone with other feeds. Put it in a separate compartment in the feeder.

Plant a field of early maturing corn for the pigs to "hog down." Harvesting is one-seventh of the cost of producing a corn crop. Pigs will gather the corn and pay for the privilege.

All pigs and hogs should have access to a mineral mixture made up of ten pounds of superphosphate, ten pounds of lime, and two pounds of salt.

30 to 40 Leaves Needed to Produce Good Peach

How many leaves are required to produce enough food to develop a good peach? Experiments by the United States Department of Agriculture indicate at least 30 to 40 leaves are necessary. Forty to fifty leaves are required to develop a good-sized apple, and about 50 for an orange.

Producers of large peaches provide larger leaf areas—more than 40 leaves per peach—by thinning the fruit closely. This permits the peaches left on the tree to get more food from the leaves. When the fruit set is light for the entire tree—but perhaps heavy on certain branches and the leaves plentiful—the fruit may be left unthinned.

After a damaging freeze fruit may set only at the base of the shoots. When this occurs the leaves on the bearing and nonbearing shoots will under favorable conditions produce peaches of good size and quality although the fruit may be only a few inches apart. Leaves far away from the fruit and those on the nonbearing shoots also help to manufacture food.

Change Color of Onions

Science has taken another stride forward in saving the farmer thousands of dollars a year by "painting" onions a golden-brown color. Minerals are used instead of ordinary paints and the onions grow golden brown in color with thick skins instead of a lemon yellow with thin skins. The painting is done with the application of copper sulphate on muck soil, according to Prof. J. S. Knott, of Cornell university. Farmers, he professor said, found it difficult to sell their onions as long as they remained a lemon-yellow color with thin skins.

Lady's Painful Trouble Helped By Cardui

Why do so many women take Cardui for the relief of functional pains at monthly times? The answer is that they want results such as Mrs. Herbert W. Hunt, of Hallsville, Texas, describes. She writes: "My health wasn't good. I suffered from cramping. My pain would be so intense it would nauseate me. I would just drag around, so sluggish and 'dopeless.' My mother decided to give me Cardui. I began to mend. That tired, sluggish feeling was gone and the pains disappeared. I can't praise Cardui too highly because I know it helped me." . . . If Cardui does not help YOU, consult a physician.
